FOUR HARMOY BOYS AT THE AUDITORIUM.

On Monday, July 16th, the manage-ment of the Auditorium will start on its usual customary summer schedule of motion pictures and songs. The illustrated songs will be done away with for the first week anyway, and will be substituted by a quartette of excellent male singers. This quartette is known as the Four Harmony Boys and has just closed a most successful meason with the Dockstader Minstrel show.

In keeping this quartette here for a period of weeks means considerable expense to the management and if the patronage through the hot summer months does not warrant the extra expense the illustrated songs will again be resorted to.

Besides this excellent quartette four reels of pictures will be shown. The price of admission will be 10 cents all court the house.

BREED THEATER.

a truly thrilling tale is the one fea A truly thrilling tale is the one fea-tured at the Breed today, entitled A. Temporary Truce. This is one of the Biograph's peerless picturesque offer-ings and is in two reels, covering two thousand feet of film, and carrying a story of the early days in the west, when living was not always possible or pleasant. The scenery in it is re-markable for its beauty and grandeur, while the vivid tale is unfoided by the while the vivid tale is unfolded by the same great cast that has made these pictures famous. There is not a dull memont in it, and the audiences are mement in it, and the audiences are imbued with enthusiasm from the start of the pictures.

One of the pictures that reaches the hearts of all is entitled The Vagaboads and tells a story of the downfall of a young man, all through falling interbad habits, and of his redemption by an army of Christian workers. This picture has a powerful moral and is been of the gems of the bill.

afford to abandon the project at that stage of the game.

Then came the building of the foundation and all before the contract for the building was awarded. Finally it was decided to have the building of lime stone and discard the brown stone section of the building and the contract for building the superstructure above the foundation walls was awarded for an even $30,000 or $15,000. awarded for an even $80,000 or $15,000 more than was originally specified as the limit that the committee could use in the building. At the time it was suggested in this correspondence that tab be kept on all that was expended in the enlargement of the city half, for the sum was sure to be exceeded. At the special meeting, when the contract for $80.000 was ratified it was tract for $80,000 was ratified it was given out that the building when completed will have cost the city at least $115,000. But New London harleast $115,000. But New London har-bor is to be developed and there is to be another city hall building on the site of the present, so what's the use.

A local historian is writing interesting material of doings of bygone days in New London, which demonstrates careful research of records and dillgent inquiry among the oldest in-habitants. What he writes from record is incontrovertible, but what he picks up here and there from in-dividuals is occasionally, nor velto often, subject to discussion. His latest published historical reminiscence refers to the New London police force when in its infancy. He is modestly told by Hezeklah B. Smith that he (Smith) was the first uniformed policeman of New London and perhaps he was. It is true some years ago a Norwich newspaper printed a strictly true item in saying that New London had a police force and its name was Smith. But the first police officer in uniform that an old-tad often, subject to discussion. officer in uniform that an old-tad who lived in New London since an in-fant and who was ten years of age when the war was declared with the south, is strongly of opinion that the first uniformed policeman he ever saw, and that was in New London, was not Hezekiah H. Smith, but waste Amos Avery. This tad remembers Avery going into a newspaper office to be inspected and in fact made a round of the stores in order to get pubthe blue coat and brass buttons with club at his side. Mr. Smith may have antedated Avery, but if he did the old tad is of course mistaken.

The local historian has been writing The local historian has been writing on matters of ancient history of invaluable interest and the pity is that they are not being compiled for general publication in book form. It is now nearly sixty-two years since Miss Frances M. Caulkins' History of New London was flublished and it is about time that another book of the time that another book of like character was published. No man is better qualified to prepare such a work than Richard B. Wall as he has work than Richard B. Wall as he has been collecting historical maigrial for many years. Miss Caulkins was well supplied with this world's goods and the first cost of Issuing such a publication was a mere bagatelle. That lady had the time, the inclination and the cash to carry on the work, but not so with Mr. Wall. He has the inclination, but cannot afford to give not so with Mr. Wall. He has the in-clination, but cannot afford to give the time and put up the cash to pay for the publication. He surely has the ability and there ought to be public spirited men enough in the city to en-gage Mr. Wall to publish a history of New London, a sort of volume two of the original edition, covering the period of Miss Caulkins history to date of publication and to include the building of the million dollar pier the building of the million dollar pier and the development of New London harbor.

"LIGHTLY ROW,"

O'er the glassy wards we go;
Smoothly glide! Smoothly glides
On the slient tide
Let the winds and water be
Mingled with our melody;
Sing and fleat! Sing and float!
In our little boat.

Far away! Far away!
Echo in the rocks at play;
Calleth not! Calleth net!
To this lonely spot.
Only with the sea hird's note
Shall our dying music float;
Echo's voice is low.

Lightly row! Lightly row! O'er the giassy waves we go: Smoothly glide! Smoothly glide. On the silent tide. Let the winds and waters be Mingled with our melody: Sing and float! Sing and float! In our little boat.—Spanish Melody.

If I could love another land as well

As once to dream, or fashion werds
to tell,
What land could hold my love from

I feel thy sweet and secret sovereignty,
And like a birthmark on my soul thy
